HOUSING DISCRIMINATION IS ILLEGAL

The federal Fair Housing Act prohibits discrimination in housing related transactions because of race, color, religion, national origin, sex, disability or familial status. Many state and local laws also prohibit housing discrimination based on several additional protected classes.

The Fair Housing Act applies to a wide variety of housing transactions, including rentals, sales, home mortgages, appraisals and homeowners insurance. Landlords, real estate agents, lenders, insurance companies and condominium, cooperative and homeowner associations must not discriminate because of one's membership in a protected class.

Housing discrimination is against the law. One way to stop discrimination is to report it.

SOME SIGNS OF POSSIBLE DISCRIMINATION

- The availability changed between a phone contact and an in-person visit.
- The housing provider refused to sell, rent, or show available housing or charged a higher security deposit.
- Advertisements expressed a preference for singles or couples but the community does not qualify as housing for older persons.
- Families with children or persons with disabilities were limited or steered to certain buildings or to the first floor.
- The housing provider:
 - Failed or delayed to make repairs or maintain the property.
 - Limited the use of services or facilities or privileges.
 - Refused to make a reasonable accommodation or allow a reason modification for a person with a disability.

COMMONLY ASKED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Must all landlords comply with the Fair Housing Act?

The Fair Housing Act covers most housing. In some circumstances, the Fair Housing Act exempts owner-occupied buildings with no more than four units. Communities that qualify for the "Housing for Older Persons" exemption under the Fair Housing Act are permitted to exclude families with children under the age of 18.

What is the definition of a disability?

A disability is a physical or mental impairment which substantially limits one or more major life activities such as caring for one's self, performing manual tasks, walking, seeing, hearing, speaking, breathing, learning and working. It also includes a record of having such an impairment or being regarded as having such an impairment. The law also covers someone who is associated with a person with a disability.

What is a reasonable accommodation?

A "reasonable accommodation" is a change, exception or adjustment to a rule, policy, practice or service that may be necessary for a person with a disability to have an equal opportunity to use and enjoy a dwelling, including its public and common use space. For example, reasonable accommodations include allowing an assistance animal even if there is a "no pets" policy or creating a reserved accessible parking space for a specific resident.

What is a reasonable modification?

A "reasonable modification" is a structural change made to existing premises occupied or to be occupied by a person with a disability so that he or she can fully use and enjoy the premises. Reasonable modifications can include structural changes to interiors and exteriors of dwellings, and to the common and public use areas.

Examples of reasonable modifications include installing grab bars or ramps, lowering counter spaces, and allowing a person with a hearing impairment to install strobes. The resident is responsible for paying the cost of the modification. Tenants are obligated to restore the interior of the unit to its previous state only where it is reasonable to do so and the housing provider has requested the restoration. Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 may require landlords that receive federal funds to pay for reasonable modifications.

What does "familial status" mean?

"Familial status" means the presence of children under 18 in the household. This includes pregnant women and persons in the process of adopting or securing custody of a child/children. Children include foster children and grandchildren so long as the person has legal custody or written permission.

What actions does the law prohibit?

The law prohibits actions such as denying housing, limiting access to housing, discouraging home seekers, or creating different rules, fees, or standards because of one's membership in a protected class. The Fair Housing Act also prohibits harassing, coercing, intimidating, or interfering with anyone exercising or assisting someone else with his/her fair housing rights.

Does this mean that a landlord must rent to or cannot evict anyone who is a member of a protected class?

No. A housing provider has the right to refuse rental applications or evict tenants based on objective criteria, such as credit history or bad tenant history. A housing provider should set criteria and apply them equally to each applicant and resident.

A disability is a physical or mental impairment which substantially limits one or more major life activities, such as caring for one's self, performing manual tasks, walking, seeing, hearing, speaking, breathing, learning and working. It also includes having a record of such an impairment or regarding someone as having such an impairment when they do not.

May housing providers refuse to rent to me because they believe I will not be safe or cannot take care of myself?

No. The only exception, which applies to all applicants, is if an individual's tenancy poses a direct threat to the health or safety of others or would result in substantial physical damage to the property of others and a reasonable accommodation cannot significantly reduce or eliminate the threat.

What is a reasonable accommodation?

Housing providers must permit reasonable accommodations requested by residents. A "reasonable accommodation" is a change, exception or adjustment to a rule, policy, practice or service that may be necessary for a person with a disability to have an equal opportunity to use and enjoy a dwelling. For example, reasonable accommodations include allowing an assistance animal even if there is a "no pets" policy or creating a reserved accessible parking space for a specific resident.

A request for a reasonable accommodation may be denied if providing the accommodation would impose an undue financial and administrative burden on the housing provider or would fundamentally alter the nature of the provider's operations, determined on a case-by-case basis. When a housing provider refuses a requested accommodation because it is not reasonable, the provider should discuss with the requester whether there is an alternative accommodation that would effectively address the requester's disability-related needs.

Housing providers must permit reasonable modifications requested by residents. A "reasonable modification" is a structural change made to existing premises occupied or to be occupied by a person with a disability, so that he or she can fully use and enjoy the premises. Reasonable modifications can include structural changes to interiors and exteriors of dwellings, and to the common and public use areas. The resident pays the cost of the modification. Examples of reasonable modifications include installing grab bars or ramps, lowering counter spaces, and allowing a deaf or hard of hearing tenant to install strobes. Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 may require landlords that receive federal funds to pay for reasonable modifications.

May the housing provider ask for details or proof that I am disabled?

The housing provider may ask for verification of a person's disability, if it is not obvious or otherwise known to the housing provider, and may verify that a request is related to that disability. If requested, the individual may provide a written statement from a licensed medical or social service professional or other third party stating that the applicant/resident qualifies as an individual with a disability. The housing provider may not ask the person with a disability or the certifying professional about the nature or severity of the individual's disability.

LENDERS ALSO MAY NOT DISCRIMINATE

These are examples of things a lender may not do because you are a person with a disability:

- Refuse to meet with you because you request a sign language interpreter or need some other reasonable accommodation, such as meeting in a wheelchair-accessible location.
- Require medical documentation from you or require that you prove that your disability income will continue for a specified period of time, such as three years.

- Charge you a higher interest rate or fees.
- Fail to count all your sources of income, including any disability income.
- Hold you to a higher qualification standard or require a higher credit score.
- Require that you make a larger down payment or pay more in closing costs.
- Appraise the property differently because it has features such as strobes or ramps.
